The Angry Sea

Waves crashing against the rocks
Trying to wear away the stone -
The angry sea is lashing out,
And the winds just seem to moan.
Again and again it hurls itself
Upon the rocks and then -
With a show of force and foam
The waves come back again.
The tales that the sea could tell
If only it could relate -
Of stately ships and feisty crews
It caused to meet their fate!

The Angry Sea

The big, strong waves crashed on the hard cliffs. Loud like thunder, the salty water splashed and sprayed. The strong wind pushed me off the rocks into the mean sea. It was freezing cold and it was difficult to get to the surface because of the strong current. I thought I would drown and get eaten by a ferocious shark. A rescue helicopter came and saved me. I felt happy when I was inside safely. Later on, they returned me to home. When I saw my 2 brothers and Mum and Dad I was so happy!
